Dear Colonel Gregory:

It has recently been my pleasure to visit a number of the military units in the Southeast which took part in a very direct way in support of our Government's position in the Cuban crisis in October of this year. I thus had the welcome opportunity to personally congratulate their officers and men on the very real contribution they had made at a critical time in this Nation's history, and to express to them their Government's gratitude for a job well done.

Circumstances did not permit me to acknowledge openly your Detachment's significant and extended contribution to what was accomplished in the days and months prior to the climax of the Cuban situation. In spite of this, I want you, your fellow officers and men, your skilled civilian pilots, staff employees and supporting technical representatives, to know of my real and abiding appreciation for the fine job you have done so quietly for so long, not only in Cuba but in other areas of the world where vital intelligence must continue to be obtained in order to guarantee the cause of freedom. The dangers are no less real, the hardships no less difficult and your achievement no less important to your country than those experienced by the men whom we can honor publicly.
